

Dear student,

On 26 January I wrote to you to explain that, unfortunately, the trade union UCU had informed us of further strike action affecting all universities across the UK, including Queen Mary.

Over the past week, talks have been taking place to resolve the national issues, with a [joint statement published on Friday \[PDF\]](#). The talks have resulted in strike action being paused by UCU.

Industrial action only affects a very small number of our disciplinary areas and degree programmes at Queen Mary. However, for those of you who have unfortunately been affected over the past few weeks, we expect all your teaching activities to run as scheduled.

I would also like to remind you to please use the missed teaching form if any scheduled educational activity is cancelled or doesn't go ahead as planned (or has been cancelled on previous strike days), and you have not been told the education will be made up.

Best wishes,

Stephanie
